Council flounders on Flanders Mansion

By PAUL WOLF

City council members want to keep the residence in public hands, but they recognize the city doesn't have the money to fix it up.

IT IS said that the true meaning of a dilemma is that neither alternative is very good.

In the case of city-owned Flanders Mansion, the choices are to sell it to a private party or spend a fortune to fix it up for some public use. Neither one appeals to Carmel City Council members, who last week directed the city staff to resurrect a third option: keep the property but find somebody else to pay for its renovation.

Ironically, a man who recently offered to do just that — lease the property long-term and pay the costs of its restoration — now is only interested in buying it. The sad lesson of the years-long Flanders deadlock is that, while the dialogue continues, the options evaporate.

Palo Alto-based real estate attorney John Paul Hanna once proposed a 99-year lease with the city which would combine a discounted rent with high payments for renovation. But Hanna has grown weary of the seemingly never-ending changes-of-mind by council members.

"I wouldn't do that now," he told The Pine Cone this week. "I'm not sure I'd want the city of Carmel as my landlord. I'd have to be continually dealing with them, and that doesn't appeal to me."

Hanna now prefers an outright purchase of the property, but city officials, as of a May 5 city council meeting, do not. Instead, the council wants a long-term lease agreement in which the city would keep the property, but the private party would pay as much as $750,000 to improve the mansion, which the city bought 26 years ago.

Ongoing quandary

The mansion is located off Hatton Road at the east end of town.

The city has never been able to find a suitable use for it. And, in all fairness to city officials, nearby residents haven't

Escapee leads deputy on frantic CV chase

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

AN ESCAPED inmate from Monterey County Jail led a sheriff's deputy on a high speed chase along Carmel Valley Road May 6 and then allegedly lied about his identity, even though his real name was tattooed on his back.

Even more amazing, Joshua Abanathie, 22, had originally escaped from the Monterey County Rehabilitation Center after he was arrested and sentenced for someone else's crimes, according to the sheriff's department.

On March 29, Monterey police officers questioned Abanathie during an investigation. Abanathie reportedly told officers that he was Andrew Fuller, which is the name of a friend who happened to have a warrant out for his arrest, police said. Abanathie faced Fuller's charges in court and even went to jail in his friend's place, according to sheriff's department Sgt. Bruce Palmer.

However, within 24 hours, Abanathie escaped from the rehabilitation center. Officers arrived at Fuller's house and discovered the real Fuller didn't bear much resemblance to the man who had taken his

This 1924 Percy Parkes house has been approved again for demolition.

By TAMARA GRIPPI

FOR THE second time in six months, the Carmel Planning Commission approved the demolition of a San Antonio Avenue home that has been described as merely ordinary, a work of fabled Carmel builder M.J. Murphy and, most recently, a house attributed to notable contractor Percy Parkes.

By a unanimous vote, commissioners decided that there was nothing remarkable about the old house to afford it protected historic status.

"I don't think anyone would consider this an icon," said Commissioner Frank Wasko. "My personal opinion is not only is it not an icon, but I don't even

DEATH CLAIMS EDWARD WESTON'S SON, NEIL, FAMED CHILD MODEL

By PAUL WOLF

NEIL WESTON, son of photography giant Edward Weston and perhaps the most famous nude child model in the medium's history, died in Hawaii Saturday, May 9. He was 81.

A Carmel resident for most of his life, Edward Weston's third-born only dabbled in photography, unlike his brothers, Brett and Cole, who carried on their father's life work.

But Neil Weston, a carpenter and builder of homes and boats, will always be remembered as the cherubic presence in some of the most memorable of Edward Weston's nudes, taken during the early and mid-1920s.

"The pieces with Neil in them are very sought-after and well-known, especially within the photography collection world," said Maggi Weston, owner of the Weston Gallery in Carmel.

Cole Weston, the youngest of the four Weston sons and two years Neil's junior, occasionally teased Neil about his most-favored status as a subject. "Neil would reply, 'Well, I guess I had a better figure than you,'" Cole said.

He added: "My dad was doing many nudes back then, but never anything with a nude child. There are pictures of the other three Weston boys, but they are not serious photographs. There was a whole portfolio of Neil as a boy. He was the most famous nude child ever photographed."

Al Weber, a photographer, friend and neighbor while Neil Weston lived in the Carmel Highlands, said, "Neil was never embarrassed about these photos. They were just part of growing up. On the other hand, he didn't he strut around saying,

SCENIC ROAD MAN STABBED IN HIS BEDROOM

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A 37-YEAR-old woman stabbed her father several times with a kitchen knife in their Scenic Road home late Wednesday night.

The woman, who has had a long history of mental problems, appeared at her parents' bedroom at 11:43 p.m. and stabbed her father in his right arm and hand, according to Carmel Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

Carmel police asked The Pine Cone not to disclose the name of the woman in order to protect the victim, her father.

The woman — who lived with her parents on Scenic Road — had been arrested earlier in the day May 13 for trespassing at a local hotel.

Her parents picked her up at Monterey County Jail and brought her home around 10 p.m. The woman wanted to stay in the car while her parents went into their house.

The couple left a door open for their daughter. The next time they saw her, she was standing at the bedroom door with the knife in her hands, according to Poitras.

The couple reported that she was delusional during the attack. The father was able to fend off the daughter while the wife fled the bedroom to call the police. The woman eventually dropped the knife and left the house, police said.

When police arrived on the scene they found the woman sitting in her parents' car. She offered no resistance when officers arrested her.

Although the father suffered from several cuts, his injuries weren't life threatening. An ambulance brought him to CHOMP for treatment.

The woman is being held at Natividad Medical Center for evaluation. The D.A.'s office will consider charging her with assault with a deadly weapon. Police haven't yet determined a motive for the attack.

Burglar smashes window with brick at Carmel inn

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A BURGLAR broke into a room at the Carmel Resort Inn by hurling a brick through a window, stealing $1,835 worth of clothing and camera equipment.

Sometime between 5 and 10 p.m on May 12, the suspect managed to reach through the hole made by the brick, open up the window and climb into the room, according to Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

When the guests returned to their room, they discovered that a black suitcase containing a Canon 35 millimeter camera and clothes were missing. A travel bag was also taken.

Church awards $14,500 in college scholarships

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

PARISHIONERS at Carmel's Church of the Wayfarer have rewarded 12 outstanding local high school seniors with scholarships for their first year of college. Donors to the church swelled this year's scholarship fund to $14,500, a far cry from the original scholarship of $500 given in 1978.

All of the students excel academically, with grade point averages of at least 3.5. They are all active in local Christian churches and many have volunteered in outreach programs on the Peninsula or in Mexico.

This year's scholarship winners are Sara Anne Holine of Carmel High School, Samuel David Allen, Lindsay Brooke Hewland Butler and Jimmy Yiu-Jie Jia of Robert Louis Stevenson School; Jonathan Stoner-Holk of Pacific Grove High School.

Also, China Rose Starr of Santa Catalina High School; Stephany Norah Duda, Kristen Michele Catalano and Lisa Jang of the York School; and Kelly Rose Anderson, Suzanne Amy Asfoor and Peter Y. Hwang of Monterey High.

LOST CAT

Please help me if you can: My much loved silver shaded Persian kitty who I placed in a home in the Carmel area on Sept. 11, 1997 has been lost. I have just found out about this and I am very upset with the person I placed the cat with. I am hoping that if you or someone that you know have found the kitty you have placed her in a loving home. The person who lost the kitty told me that she lost the cat somewhere around the middle of September, 1997. It is now 8 months after the fact and I have very little hope of finding out what has happened to the kitty. I can only hope that someone sees this ad and calls me to give my broken heart some peace.

I am not looking to take the cat back, unless you or your friend are unable to take care of her. I just would like to know that the kitty is o.k. If you know anything about her please call me ASAP. If you decide to keep her call me and I can give you all her information; regarding her medical history (shots and all), and I can also give information on her pedigree.

THANK YOU IN ADVANCE — Pam - 663-1617

Please help me find my lost kitty, white with aqua eyes rimmed in black.

Guns stolen from Carmel home

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A SEMI-AUTOMATIC rifle, two handguns and a pair of handcuffs were stolen right out of a retired CHP officer's garage sometime within the last month.

Robert McCurdy discovered that a six-inch Colt Python 357 Magnum and a 380 caliber PPK Walther semi automatic had disappeared from his Oliver Road residence May 5.

McCurdy had moved some furniture into the garage when his house was threatened with flooding in April. At that time he stored the guns on an upper shelf in the garage.

The garage door had been open for some time while people helped McCurdy move his furniture.

When he began moving the furniture back into the house in early May, McCurdy discovered that the guns, handcuffs and some holsters were missing.

Sheriff's department deputies are still trying to check serial numbers for the weapons.

FLANDERS

made it easy, as they lobbied the council last year to reject a promising plan (approved by a task force after months of study) for a culinary center in the mansion.

Hanna, a Palo Alto resident who has owned property in Carmel for years, says $2 million is a more realistic figure for renovation. He said he'd be willing to improve the property only if he actually owned it.

Most of the improvements he envisions would be structural, although he has some unusual plans, such as a grass tennis court on the grounds. He does not want to buy the property without having all of his remodeling and development ideas approved before close of escrow. "I don't want to go through one hassle after another with the city," he said. "I want everything decided ahead of time."

In a March 12 letter to the mayor, Hanna proposed buying the 1.4-acre property for $1.1 million. White has not responded to the letter.

"We've gotten a number of proposals," White said. "I can't go acting on my own. I have to do what the whole council wants. I've turned all the letters over to the staff."

Having their cake...

If indecision has characterized the city's position toward Flanders, it is only because > 'I don't want to go through one hassle after another with the city. I want everything decided ahead of time.'

> — John Paul Hanna

officials, in a sense, want to have their cake and eat it too. On one hand, they want to keep Flanders in public hands to protect the adjoining Mission Trail Park and Lester Rowntree Arboretum. On the other hand, they want to fix it up before it becomes unfixable, as City Administrator Jere Kersnar described it.

"We need a reality check," said White, thinking of other budget priorities, such as renovating Sunset Center. "We don't have the money."

At the May 5 meeting, a number of residents argued that the city must keep the building to prevent an "inholding" of private property in a park setting.

"Surely someone can find a use for this house," said Marjorie Adams, a volunteer gardener at the arboretum. "If you sell it too fast, you'll just wind up using the money for groceries."

At other meetings in recent years, however, there has been a chorus of voices saying: "sell, sell." A city-hired consultant also advised Carmel in recent weeks to sell Flanders.

think it's second tier."

Under the city's new policy that applies the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) to historic structures, the planning department staff did an initial study of the demolition project, just to be on the safe side, according to senior planner Rick Tooker. The study showed that demolishing the house won't have any significant impacts on the environment, Tooker said.

The commission voted to accept that finding and approve the demolition, as well as the design for owner Ron Donati's new home.

Although Donati's house was originally approved for demolition in November, a series of rather complicated events brought the house to the city council and back to the planning commission again over a period of six months.

The planning staff originally went through the files prepared by the Carmel Preservation Foundation — the nonprofit group contracted to survey historic homes for the city — and found that the Donati house wasn't even in the inventory of surveyed homes.

Tooker said he called the foundation and asked the group to bring any revelant historic information to the meeting. They brought none.

Without any evidence indicating the home was historic, the planning commission approved its demolition November 12.

Then, two neighbors concerned about the views from their homes, appealed that decision to the city council.

One neighbor also contacted Sales and suggested she carefully study the home's historical value.

Sales told The Pine Cone that she agreed, and her research found information in the city files showing that the house was built by M.J. Murphy. The city council accepted the report showing Murphy as the builder and voted to demolish it anyway.

Then during further investigations, Sales went to the recorder's office in Salinas and discovered that Parkes was the actual builder. She found the house's "notice of completion" signed by Parkes.

Parkes is considered a "top builder" who was part of a major period of Carmel's development between 1919 and 1930, according to Kent Seavey, a preservation consultant.

You want studies?

In February when the city council reviewed the latest report—identifying Parkes as the builder—members asked staff to determine if an EIR should be done.

place for the last few days.

Then on May 6, Deputy Frank Duenas spotted a man driving a motorcycle without brake lights or a license plate on Laureles Grade. When Duenas turned his lights and siren on, the motorcyclist sped away, passing southbound cars in the northbound lane, Duenas said. "He was running cars off the road."

The motorcyclist, later identified as Abanathie, continued his erratic driving on Carmel Valley Rd. through the Village until he crashed into shrubbery.

This time, Abanathie reportedly claimed he was someone else, a Carmel Valley local. However, Abanathie ran out of luck when the fireman who treated him for his injuries knew the person Abanathie was pretending to be.

Then when fire fighters cut off his shirt to tend to his neck pain, they discovered the name "Abanathie" tattooed on his back. Even at that point, the renegade stuck to his story.

"Have you ever heard of Abanathie Music?" he reportedly asked. "It means something in Italian."

This time Abanathie is again in jail facing charges that are all his own: evading a police officer, taking a vehicle without owner's consent, receiving stolen property, giving false information and driving with a suspended license.

According to the foundation's report, the Donati house qualifies as an historically significant structure because of architectural distinction, notable construction and unique site.

The city's historic committee voted unanimously to add the house to Carmel's historic list. However, a procedural glitch nullified that vote.

Then the planning commission agreed that the Donati house doesn't meet the criteria for historic designation after all. "If a lot of structures should be saved because they are Percy Parkes, perhaps they all should be saved," Tooker said, arguing that a house needs to be remarkable in itself to be historic.

Donati was frustrated by the delays he faced. "You owe it to the community and landowner to inform them in advance whether or not they're dealing with a historic property," he said.

Robert D'Isidoro, the attorney for neighbor Joel Gambord, argued that by approving the demolition the city was putting its character at stake.

"All you need to do is view the house from both outside and within to appreciate why the house is a valuable property in our dwindling inventory of cultural resources," he said.

The planning commission again disagreed, voting unanimously to allow the demolition.

CAN YOU TELL WHICH ONE IS YOUR CHILD?

FORTUNATELY, KIDSAFE™ CAN.

Children get lost or separated from family. Or worse.

When a child is missing, the first thing police need is a good photograph.

So copies can quickly go to police officers, hospitals, and the news media.

Fingerprints are also vital for an unconscious child, especially when a medical emergency requires prompt identification.

If you are like many of us, you may not have either on hand.

KidSafe™ can help.

Pine Cone receives state award for excellence

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE CARMEL Pine Cone has been named one of the top weekly newspapers in California.

The Pine Cone is one of two finalists in the California Newspaper Publishers Association award for "general excellence." The final award will be announced at the CNPA convention July 18 in San Diego.

"It is always a great honor to be recognized by your peers," said Pine Cone co-publisher Kirstie Wilde. "This award tells us we're doing a good job and are on the right track."

California editors and publishers, assisted in the final selections by a panel of national judges, evaluated the writing, news gathering, graphics and editorial voice of dailies and weeklies. Wilde and her husband, Paul Miller, purchased and expanded The Pine Cone in April 1997.

The Pine Cone was one of 34 California weeklies that competed in the contest, according to Lara Burgess, an administrative assistant for CNPA membership services.

In recent years, The Pine Cone has won several CNPA awards, but it has not received first or second in the most prestigious category for overall quality in at least a decade.

CORRECTION

DESPITE THE Pine Cone's overall excellence, we had several inaccuracies in our article on the Carmel city council's committee appointments last week. The correct appointments are:

- City finance and investment committee — Paula Hazdovac and Barbara Livingston.
- City personnel committee — Ken White and Marshall Hydorn.
- Parking 2000 Committee— White and Sue McCloud.
- Fort Ord Reuse Authority — White and Livingston (alternate).

Task force wraps up its master plan for Carmel

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AFTER A year on the job, members of the Carmel Beach Master Plan Task Force completed their comprehensive report that includes recommendations for improved handicapped access, emergency telephones and a beach patrol officer.

The newly completed master plan contains various recommendations designed to improve beach access, safety, education and facilities.

"This isn't visionary stuff," said task force chairwoman and former mayor Jean Grace. "This is down to earth, the way the beach should be, as soon as possible."

Task Force members agreed that while there is adequate access for wheelchairs to reach the sand from Scenic Road south of Eighth Avenue, the city could do more — provide a ramp crossing the bluffs or consider the possibility of handicapped access to the water.

If the city can't fund special new equipment, perhaps handicapped people would be able to reserve time to use the sand buggies, which the city already owns, Grace said.

The group decided that the number of beachgoers warrants a third restroom facility, somewhere between the existing bathrooms at Del Mar and Santa Lucia. The task force took care to suggest that the restroom be designed to be inconspicuous from Scenic Road — a point that some Scenic residents might regard as impossible.

Last year debate heated up when the city planned to make the port-a-potties at Santa Lucia permanent. Some Scenic residents strongly objected to the restrooms, calling them a "blight."

Grace, who was mayor from 1988 to 1992, called both the Del Mar restrooms and Santa Lucia facilities "absolutely necessary." The city could install a new semi-permanent structure part way down the bluffs, which could be moved out during the winter storms, Grace said.

Beach deputy

Members decided that the beach needs a deputized beach officer, along the lines of a parking officer, who would help the city contend with everything from people "short-cutting" down the bluffs, (and worsening the erosion) to safety problems.

"We didn't want to take any police officers who might be called away on an emergency," Grace explained. "Someone who can give citations and who can be there when necessary."

Members agreed that the city should take another step to insure safety on the beach and install two emergency phones along Scenic between Eighth Avenue and Santa Lucia.

Emergency phones could provide a much quicker way to reach the police than knocking on doors along Scenic Drive, hoping someone is home, Grace said.

Such a phone would have been a great help to Grace's son, who rescued a drowning man from the water and performed artificial resuscitation on him back in 1989.

Trained docents

The task force recommended various other ways to improve the beach for locals, including rebuilding a stairway south of 12th avenue and providing monthly beach tours, led by members of the city staff. Members decided that trained docents could help educate people about the beach and its rules.

Some rules need more support, according to the task force, such as the restriction against taking short cuts down the bluffs. Members agreed that barriers and signs would serve as better deterrents.

The task force also decided that the Del Mar parking lot and beach area could use various improvements such as handicap access, picnic tables expanded parking and a gazebo for the beach officer.

A special Del Mar task force should be set up to develop plans for those improvements.

How soon the master plan's recommendations are implemented will depend on the city's priorities, said City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

There are still parts of the city's general plan that haven't been adopted, Kersnar said.

The master plan will fulfill a requirement for the city to complete its local coastal program, mandated by the California Coastal Act. The forest and beach commission will review the master plan in June and then forward it to the city council.

Entrepreneur and philanthropist Arch Butts Jr. a local auto legend

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

J. ARCH BUTTS Jr., a benefactor of the community, father, entrepreneur and philanthropist, passed away in his home May 2 after battling a stroke. He was 84.

The year was 1904 and the Butts family, living in the Midwest, made their livelihood through lumber and hardware. When a Kansas tractor company created a car called the National, the course of the family's life was forever changed. Mr. Butts' grandfather, John H. Butts, started selling the National that year, acquired a Buick franchise in 1907 and a GM dealership three years later. Oddly, Don Butts of Pebble Beach recalls, his great-grandfather never encouraged his grandfather to go into the business and his grandfather never encouraged his father.

OBITUARY

'My father's feeling was that we are all a part of this community and we need to contribute to it.'

— Don Butts

"As a young man, he would discourage me from getting into the family business," Don said. Yet the fourth generation is now presiding over the acres of dealerships in the Seaside Auto Plaza: Butts Acura and Butts Pontiac-Cadillac-Jeep-Eagle. One of Mr. Butts six grandchildren, Don said, might well make the fifth.

Auto Plaza visionary

Of course, without the ingenuity of Arch Butts, the Seaside Auto Plaza might not exist today. Don said his father was the first man to buy land there to establish a Cadillac dealership. Don said all the other auto dealers told him, "Nobody will come out to Seaside for that!" But slowly, Don said, they did come, eventually building the biggest auto center in Monterey County.

Mr. Butts and his family did not always live on the Peninsula. He was born in Wichita, Kan. on June 17, 1913 and did not move to the area until 1955 when he established the dealership. He attended Stanford with his eventual wife and lifetime companion, Rose. Don said they loved Carmel and Pebble Beach and always vowed to one day return here with their family: two sons, Jacob III and Donald and daughter Cameron. They kept true to their promise and returned to become Pebble Beach residents for almost five decades.

Give back to the community

As the dealership took roots in the community's soil, Mr. Butts began implementing his philosophy that those who take from the community should also give back — two or threefold. "My father's feeling was that we are all a part of this community and we need to contribute to it," according to his son. Mr. Butts established a program of giving at his dealerships: every employee, every month, for more than 30 years, donates part of his paycheck to the Monterey County United Way.

Mr. Butts also was a vital part of Community Hospital, serving on the board of trustees as well as offering wisdom and advice for 30 years. He was a founder of the Pacheco Club and a member of the Old Capital Club and the Cypress Point Club. He served as chairman in 1972 for the U.S. Open Golf Championship in Pebble Beach. He served on the board of Santa Catalina School, where three generations of Butts children have received an education.

Mr. Butts took immense pleasure in his life and work, and touched many lives. Don's desk at work is heaped with letters praising his father's loyalty and dedication to the community. Don said, "I figured I would answer 20 of them a day." At this rate, it will still take him a month.

J. Arch Butts is survived by his wife, Rose; sons Jake and Don; daughter Cameron Bianchi; sister Barbara Headlee of Hemet, Ca. and six grandchildren.

Electric car doesn't go far, but it gets there fast.

By PAUL MILLER

GENERAL MOTORS' breakthrough electric car, the EV1, has been introduced in central California and is available for test drives at the brand-new Saturn dealership on Capitol Expressway in San Jose.

You can park one in your driveway and be the envy of all the environmentalists on your street for $399 a month. But don't plan any long trips to show off the car to your Aunt Gladys in Fresno, or even your Uncle Harry in Paso Robles, because the EV1 won't go that far.

GM has offered the cars for a year in Arizona and Southern California — regions which were chosen for the car's debut not for marketing reasons, but for meteorological ones. The car stores its electric "fuel" in old-fashioned lead-acid batteries — 24 of them — which produce much less power in cold weather. It's a major concern because the car's limited range is its biggest drawback, and is undoubtedly the principal reason why GM was able to convinced only 300 people to spring for the car in 1997.

General Motors says the EV1 will go 75 miles on a full charge. But the car we test-drove last week didn't seem to know about that. Its sexy display panel — nothing like the ones you're used to — said the car had a "full" charge, but also said it would only be able to go 42 miles before it would need recharging.

Electric 'charging stations'

42 miles isn't far, considering that the car takes 3 hours to charge up again. And recharging is only possible at special charging stations. GM installs one in your garage when you lease the EV1 and hopes to have a network of the nifty-looking units installed around the state once electric cars catch on. But for now, you'll have to stay near home.

On the other hand, millions of Californians would jump at the chance to see the highways fill up with non-polluting vehicles. Even car-crazy Los Angelenos would surely like to see their city become smog-free. Electric cars will no doubt become very popular as battery technology improves and the range of electric cars increases.

GM developed the EV1 under pressure from California and the federal government to put some zero-emission cars on the roads.

And, except for the car's limited range, the auto behemoth did a wonderful job.

A car you don't 'start'

You can't buy an EV1. They're only available with either a two-year or a three-year lease.

And your new EV1 doesn't come with a key. Instead, you get a code which unlocks the door and which is also used to 'start' the car. Actually, you don't start it, you just turn it on. And nothing happens. No sound, just a sequence of warning lights briefly illuminating and the

New technology makes the burden of smog inspections a little easier to bear

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

FOR THOSE of us who have not had to smog our car recently, there is some new technology on the frontier that makes this task — usually as pleasurable as a splinter — a little less painful. All vehicle smog inspection stations, whether they are a service station or a dealership, are now required by the state to send certificates of passing smog inspections via e-mail to the Department of Motor Vehicles in Sacramento.

This process not only saves trees, but it saves the customer a lot of time, reports Eldon Davis, service manager for Stahl Motors in Seaside. Most people think that not only is having your car smogged every two years a serious pain, but it's also costly, he says. The new way "is a lot easier for us and for them."

More convenient for everyone

Dick Cullen, one of the owners of All Automotive, a repair shop in Seaside authorized for smog inspections, said the state decided last year an e-mail system would be more convenient for everyone. The system was implemented statewide in July last year. Car owners with a vehicle built before 1974 don't have to smog it at all. As of January 1, 1998, new cars are not required to have a test for four full years. But anyone purchasing a car from someone else must have it smogged — even if it's a car built in 1998.

Those of us whose cars fall between 1974 and 1998 are doomed to do the duty. Depending on where you take your vehicle to be smog inspected, the prices will vary. Davis said dealerships usually cost a bit more for service, but the benefit is that if your car does not pass inspection, technicians there will be able to take care of the problem immediately.

The actual certificate costs $8.25, but the entrepreneur doing the test can charge whatever he wants for it, usually between $35 and $70. Check the Sunday papers for coupons for smog inspections, they can sometimes save you $10 to $30.

Scenario remains the same

The scenario for getting your car smogged is still the same: make an appointment, flip through a magazine while a cord is stuck up the tailpipe of your car, then pay the bill you think is thoroughly unfair. The only difference now is that you have no paper products to take home to float aimlessly around the house until the last possible second when you sigh, put a stamp on it and drop it in the mail.

Paul Simonsen (center), who led the Pirates to a fifth place finish by scoring 32 of the team's 36 points, etched his name into Stevenson's record books by taking first in three sprints: the 400m (50.5), the 100m (11.2) and the 200m (22.6).

Stevenson speed demon sprints for record book

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE SITE of last Friday's MTAL Track and Field Championship, Hartnell College in Salinas, turned into a stage for some local prep runners who put on quite a show of talent.

As Stevenson speed demon Paul Simonsen was setting a school record by winning three events, the CHS girls track squad was busy capturing its first league title in four years.

Meanwhile, the CHS girls, who were led by first place finishers Sarah Coombe (200m), Vanessa Auburn (400m) and Natalie Johnson (shotput), put together a solid team effort in defeating runner-up Notre Dame 141-76.

Two of the top performers for the CHS boys team, which finished third, were Chip and Skip Powers, who finished second in the 1,600m (4:33) and first in the 300m intermediate high hurdles (41.9), respectively.

Lady Pirate Aicha Herbrand also broke a Stevenson record by racing to a 16.1 time in the 100m high-hurdles.

Next up for the runners will be the CCS Trials, which are slated Saturday, May 16 and the CCS Semi-Finals, which are scheduled for May 23 in San Jose.

Sports Wrap-up

ON THE DIAMOND: The Carmel High baseball squad (12-2, MTAL) needed only five innings last Wednesday to clinch another MTAL baseball crown, beating Gonzales 14-4. Eddie Canadas got the Padres rolling by blasting a three-run dinger in the top of the first inning while third baseman Dane Edmondson propelled the Padres by going two-for-three with a double and four RBIs.

RLS GIRL GOLFERS SWINGING FOR TITLE

By JERRY STEWART

AT ROBERT Louis Stevenson, the boys golf team, which just won its third straight CCS crown, isn't the only golf team on campus that knows how to get up and down.

Yesterday at Rancho Cañada the Stevenson girls squad teed off in its first action ever as a team in CCS competition.

Prior to this season, the Lady Pirates had only sent individual qualifiers on to the elite championship.

"It's like the Tiger effect," said head coach Michele Grogan, referring to phenom Tiger Woods, whose success has generated a new following for the game. "Every year there's more interest in the girls' golf program."

Initiated in 1993, the team this season was joined on the links by other local schools such as Monterey and Notre Dame of Salinas.

"At least now there are some teams we can play locally," said Grogan, who used to have to schedule matches as far away as the Bay Area to find competition.

Competing in a format similar to the boys (nine holes, six players per team), the Lady Pirates suffered only one loss during the regular season.

Leading the Lady Pirates are sharpshooting Alexa Bieler, who regularly shoots in the low 40s for a nine-hole tourney and Tina Kanteedang.

Other team members include Monica Walther, Amy Rueckl, Alexandra Boettmanne and Ruth and Esther Tang.

"We're not really concerned about wins or losses right now," said Grogan, who's in her fourth year at the helm. "We just want to get the girls excited for golf."

According to Grogan, the boys team has been very instrumental and supportive in helping the girls reach their goals.

"Boys coach (John) Powers has been great and we often practice together," Grogan said. "There's a real nice camaraderie between the teams."

Unfortunately for their opponents, that feeling of esprit de corps may eventually make Stevenson a golf power on another set of tees.

Hogan's Alley

By BILL HOGAN

Are weddings an excuse to golf?

I DON'T know who is responsible, but sometime in the last 25 years it was determined that, along with a bachelor party, the boys would also stage a golf tournament before the wedding.

Even guys who don't golf on a regular basis feel they have to play before a wedding. Maybe it's a mature, "married guy" kind of thing to do or just some ill-perceived rite of adulthood. Possibly, it's just an excuse to get away from the frantic bride for an afternoon.

Anyway, just like the bachelor party, the wedding tournament quickly gets out of control. Typically, some poor sap is made responsible for making the tee times, getting prizes and collecting the money. At the first tee, there's always some college friend who pulled up in a new Porsche but "forgot" his wallet. And Uncle Charlie from Las Vegas apologizes because he must "send a check." You know darn well that you'll never see that money and your round of golf is going to cost $300.

Let the fun begin

Once the boys have loaded up their bags with beer and taken off down the fairway in the carts, the fun really begins. Usually it takes about two holes before the ex-fraternity president determines that it is perfectly acceptable to cheat on every hole and his team shoots a best ball 58. Pretty good score for a bunch of 25 handicappers.

You, of course, play by the rules, post a respectable six under par team score, and lose by eight shots. But, what the heck, this is for fun and judging from the sound of the laughter and the quantity of empty bottles, everyone is having fun.

Well, guess what? Today I'm that poor sap who was given the responsibility of running my future brother-in-law's wedding tournament at Poppy Hills GC.

Fortunately, the crew at Poppy Hills is very experienced at staging tournaments and the staff has seen it all. Better yet, very few of the players actually drink so the behavior today at Poppy Hills should be quite acceptable.

If the budget was lofty enough, the boys could also book rooms and golf at some of our award-winning resorts like Pebble Beach, Spanish Bay, Quail Lodge or Carmel Valley Ranch.

What other small area has so many high quality golf options as the Monterey Peninsula? Not many, with the possible exception of Maui, Pinehurst or Palm Desert. But far more people get married on the Monterey Peninsula, my sister included, and therefore poor saps like me are placed in charge of the golf tournament.

I'd like to find that guy who started this wedding golf tradition. For one, I'd have him combine the golf tournament with the bachelor party and get it all over with at once.

Fortunately, though, we couldn't stage such a soiree here. It's too conservative. Instead, I'd have Uncle Charlie do it in Las Vegas.

ELECTRIC CAR

car's gauges coming to life.

Ready to go? You don't put the car 'in gear.' A handle similar to a traditional, floor-mounted gear shift is used to put the car in forward, reverse, or park. And when you step on the accelerator, the EV1 shows it's not in Kansas anymore.

The car doesn't make any of the usual gasoline engine racket. It makes no sound when you're not moving, and a hum and a whine are the best ways to describe what you hear when stepping on the 'gas' pedal.

The acceleration is very quick and the accelerator responds in a surprisingly subtle way. There's no traditional transmission and no changing gears — just a direct hookup between the motor and the wheels. The car goes perfectly smoothly from zero to sixty in under ten seconds. What fun!

The EV1 comes with air bags, a high-quality stereo with CD and air conditioning. It also has a neat system that allows you to set the A/C or heater with a timer so the cars warms up or cools down with 'shore power' before you start your trip — preserving some of that precious battery power to get you where you going.

And the car, which is assembled at a special plant in Lansing, Michigan, has room for only two people — another design decision which was necessary to conserve power.

But the EV1 is just the first shot in the war against the internal combustion engine. Better batteries, hybrid cars, and autos that make their own electricity with fuel cells are coming in the years ahead. It's a revolution that is as inevitable as it is overdue.

SENIOR LIVING

LOVE AND MARRIAGE

"I WAS waking up every morning with terrible headaches," said the man sipping coffee at the next table, having already described the job he'd left behind.

"Ummmm," said the attractive young woman seated with him.

"Do you know how this current coffee craze started?" asked the man, abruptly changing the subject.

"Ummmm," replied the woman, glancing surreptitiously at her watch as he began his recital.

One of the advantages of writing "Coffee Break" is that you get to spend a lot of time sitting around in cafes, eavesdropping on other folks' conversations, and learning a great deal about human nature.

Clearly, the couple above were having their first date. I could tell by the dialogue which was rapidly turning into a monologue. Things were not going well, and I wished that I could step over and gently coach the gentleman into listening more and talking less. I was fascinated because usually the roles are reversed — a nervous woman is a runaway train when it comes to conversation.

What other clues told me that these people were not a long-standing pair? His choice of subjects. A wife would already know about the headaches. Also the bunions, the cigarette cough, and the tendency to leave hair in the sink. A wife would say, "Gerald, you've told me the story of the coffee craze three times now. Give it a rest!" But this young lady was being polite, even if her "ummmms" were beginning to wear thin.

Perhaps it was she who had suggested the coffee house for their first meeting. After all, how much trouble can you get into at 10 in the morning in a public place? It also afforded the easy excuse of "a busy day" and "appointments" later when and if he launched into his medical history as this poor soul had done.

Unfortunately, I had my own appointments, and had to leave before the woman got the floor. I'm betting there was no second date.

If, however, this couple had "clicked" over their caffe lattes, and gone on to the altar, they might want to know about the "Divorce Kit" I saw at Longs a couple of weeks ago. Regularly $24.95, it was on sale at half-price.

Surprise!

Speaking of divorce, have you ever heard of a "surprise wedding"? A Carmel couple tied the knot a few weeks ago in what has to be one-of-a-kind. The pair, having lived together for some time, had discussed marriage, but not gotten around to it.

Coffee Break

By Beverly Borgman

On this particular day, the man phoned the woman at work and proposed.

When she accepted, he announced that the marriage was set for 7 THAT NIGHT. Presumably, she had time to change her clothes and fix her hair, but that's exactly what happened.

They were married in the stone chapel next to Tarpy's out on Highway 68, then came home to their cottage where a friend (one who is obviously very good at keeping secrets, had prepared a small but beautiful reception complete with candles, a blazing fireplace and a gathering of friends and family to toast the happy couple.

The last I heard, they were still married, but I do have a word of advice for this daring young man: go easy on the surprises; they don't always work. How well I remember one particular wedding anniversary.

It was a Friday and we were planning to have dinner at my favorite restaurant. That morning I looked at the house with its gently rolling balls of dust and dog hair, and thought to myself: It's my anniversary. I'm

SENIOR LIVING

Sixty-five years of marriage and counting for Carmel couple

By TAMARA GRIPPI

REACHING A 65th wedding anniversary may be an extraordinary event to most of us, but Carmelites Clyde and Ruby Babb insist that the path that brought them to their diamond celebration was a simple one — they just followed their hearts.

"We just always felt that there was no one else," Clyde Babb said.

They both grew up in Clayton, Illinois and met for the first time while playing tennis at Clayton High School. The day after Ruby Frame graduated from high school, she married Clyde Babb.

Soon after they were married, the Babbs were given a rare opportunity for a young couple just starting out — an offer to own a newspaper. As a student, Clyde had worked part-time for the weekly Clayton Enterprise. The owner liked Clyde and wanted to sell him the paper but the Babbs didn't see how they could afford it. Then the owner made them "a terrific offer," and Ruby's father offered to loan them the money. Never looking back, the Babbs bought The Enterprise and published it for the next 10 years.

"It grew and grew under our management," Clyde said. Within a few years, the couple was able to repay Ruby's father.

They loved the excitement of the newspaper business, although sometimes it was a tough spot to be in. "I made a lot of odd enemies, but they came around," Clyde recalled.

While he was serving in the U.S. Navy during World War II, Clyde wrote for the Great Lakes News in Illinois and then edited the Treasure Island Masthead in San Francisco for two years.

Clyde and Ruby Babb

The Babbs had just finished building a new house in Illinois after the war, when they decided to pack everything up and move to California.

"We asked ourselves, 'could we give everything up?'" Clyde said. "Everything" included the prestige of publishing his own paper, because the only job he was offered by The San Francisco Chronicle was that of a cub reporter.

Instead, Clyde worked in advertising and eventually joined University of California Press at Berkeley as an editor. In 1973, the couple retired to the "Babbs' Nest" cottage in Carmel, where they've lived ever since.

After 65 years together, the Babbs don't have a secret for a happy marriage, just some plain straight-forward advice. "We just worked at it and kept going," Ruby said. "A lot of people give up too quickly." "Many things can be talked out and ironed out," Clyde explained.

On the big day, May 20, the Babbs are all set to celebrate with their son and daughter-in-law who are planning a surprise night out on the town.

As always, the Babbs are ready to venture into the unknown with a smile. "Everything is a big, dark secret," Clyde said.

WESTON

'My father was the great Edward Weston.'"

"He always spoke very fondly of his father," said his widow, Jean Weston, his second wife, who was married to Neil in 1988.

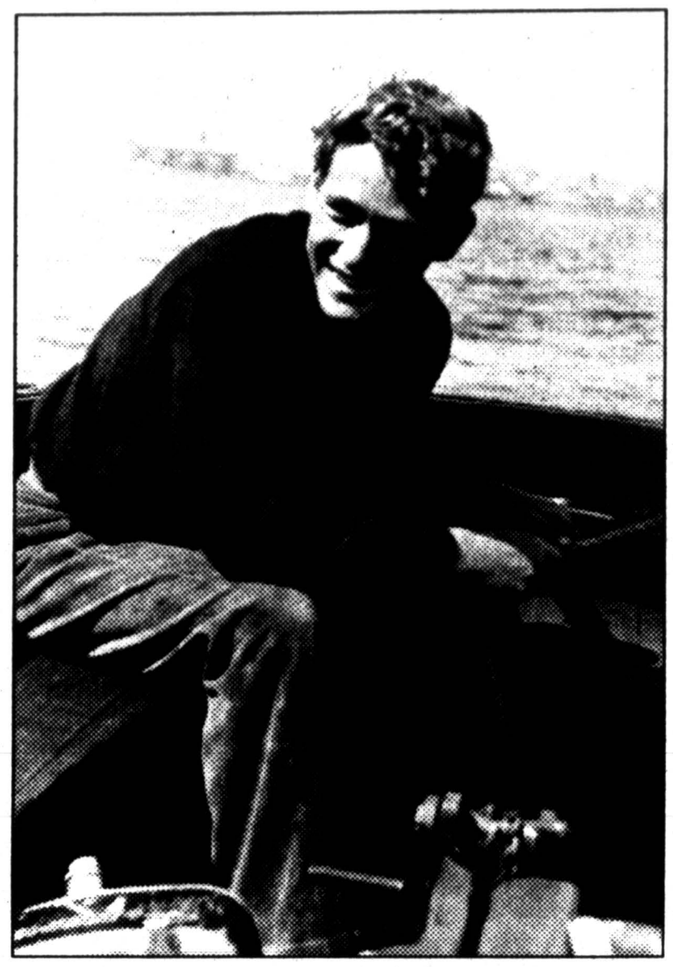
The Weston family came to Carmel in 1929, when Edward first rented a studio at the intersection of Ocean and Junipero in buildings now used as a motel.

Neil Weston attended Sunset School and Monterey High School. He was a self-taught boat builder who sold his first sailing vessel, The Goon, to John Steinbeck in the 1930s.

In 1939, he built his father's cottage (which still stands) on Wildcat Hill in Carmel Highlands. He also helped build his brother Brett's house in Waikola Village, Hawaii, which Neil bought shortly before Brett's death in 1993.

Neil was an avid sailor who was free from persistent migraines only when out to sea. "He was a born sailor," Cole said.

He is survived by his son Mark, of Pacific Grove, and daughter Jana, of Carmel. He is also survived by three step children: Chenoa, Dara and Cordell Crockett.



Neil Weston was 9 when he was captured in this 1925 image, a photograph taken by his father, Edward Weston, and printed by his brother, Cole Weston.

Slipcover Sofas

If it looks formal, feels oh so comfortable, and still looks right in today's living room, it's probably a slipcover sofa. They're everywhere. Change the season, change your mind, change your cover. And some of them are even hiding an extra bed for company. All of us who live on the Peninsula are familiar with how often our friends and relatives like to visit us, especially during holidays and summers.

When you purchase a slipcover sofa and an extra cover at the same time, you've gotten a bargain by almost anyone's standards...think about it as two sofas for little more than the cost of one. Make it a sleeper sofa too, and it becomes an unique value.

Depending on the fabric and the style, the slipcover sofas do not have to break your budget; many of them start at around six hundred ninety-nine dollars. When you purchase an extra cover at the same time, you've got a bargain by anyone's standards. What are some of these fabrics? Try soft pre-washed cottons, paisleys, and tapestries in patterns borrowed from old oriental rugs; mixes of velvets, tapestries, and leather.

Some of the most poplular color choices right now are blues—navy and white combinations in florals, toiles, checks—or blue paired with bright colors—for instance, blue and kiwi—cobalt, periwinkle, lavender, and plum blues. Spice colors are popular too—reds, gold, paprika, earthy greens and browns.

Styles range from exceedingly formal to delightfully casual. In fact, you'll see a lot of casual, it is not making a retreat. Upholstery today includes retro, sculpted velvets, and nubby chenilles, as well as soft-handed plaids, large-scale florals, and big prints in general.

When shopping for a slipcover sofa, what important features should you look for? First decide what style you want, then whether it's to be a sofa sleeper or not. Do you want loose back pillows or attached pillows and cushions. Look for 8-way hand-tied coil springs made of carbon steel, extra thick padding and high-density foam. You might want to be sure the foam is environmentally friendly and contains no CFCs. Make sure it meets California's strict flame retardant standards. If you want that "sink-in" feel, look for cushions with a wrapped foam core, surrounded by a blend of down and polyester fibers, encased in down-proof ticking. If it's a sleeper sofa you're looking for, make sure the sleeper mechanisms use heavy duty tubular construction and have premium innerspring mattresses for "bedroom-like" sleeping comfort.

While you may not be thinking of moving right now, it's also nice if the legs are screwed into the frame, so they can be removed for easier moving through tight spaces, to be replaced after the move. A strong frame is key to any sofa, and if it's wood, make sure it's kiln-dried, which reduces the moisture content, preserves the wood's integrity, and prevents warping, splitting and cracking.

So, use your imagination, get out there and find the slipcover sofa that's just right for you.

City Hall to publish council packets 24 hours earlier

By PAUL WOLF

THIS ONE falls in the category of "thank God for small favors."

As a courtesy to the community it serves, the Carmel City Council will distribute the packets for upcoming meetings 24 hours earlier.

They'll be ready on Thursdays, not Fridays — with council meetings taking place on the Tuesday of the next week.

Council packets, which include background documents and staff reports, can run 200 pages or longer. Most agree they are hard to absorb in a rush.

"I always try to alert businesses to items that affect them," said Debbie Alexander, executive director of the Carmel Business Association. "The sooner the better."

Practices and procedures were the main focus at a city council retreat held at La Playa Tuesday, May 12.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac supported the change, saying, "By the time the end of Friday rolls around and by the time you have had the chance to review the packet, it's too late to ask the staff questions because by Monday they are in meetings getting ready for the meeting."

Main drawback

City Administrator Jere Kersnar, who was the secretary of the council retreat, said the drawback of having the packets ready earlier is that the council inevitably will be dumped with more last-minute letters and questions.

Councilman Marshall Hydorn said he finds it virtually impossible to read letters that he receives as he enters the council chambers before a meeting.

Mayor Ken White said he solves the problem by arriving an hour or an hour and a half before the meetings start.

Copies of the packets are available for review at City Hall and at Harrison Memorial Library. Also, you may buy a full packet (average price: $16) or just the pages you want ($1 the first page, a dime for each additional). The city administration also prints free packets for "bona fide groups," such as Yes for Carmel, the Carmel Residents Association and Carmel Citizens for Good Government, according to City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer.

Also at the retreat, the council members:

- Found a way to stay better informed about city business without having more meetings or, more importantly, without violating the state open-meeting Brown Act: The mayor will add his own report to the Friday letter, prepared by Kersnar.
- Decided to advertise more in local newspapers to publicize openings on standing commissions and committees, such as the cultural, forestry and recreation commissions.

Council members agreed that too few fresh volunteers come forward to serve on their advisory commissions.

"We have to draw in more people," said Sue McCloud, who was elected to office last month. "During the campaign, the comment I always got was: 'It's always the same people on these committees.' I don't want to say that it's rigged, but it's always the same group. A lot of people are really turned off to participating in government."

going to treat myself to a day off; I can always clean tomorrow. I can't tell you how happy I was at the thought of leaving house and three little kids behind for a night out.

At 6 p.m. hubby went off to pick up the baby sitter. When he didn't come back in 20 minutes, I got worried. After an hour, I was about to call the police.

Then I heard his car in the drive, and opened the door to find him flanked by three couples, all neighbors, all holding take-out food. Yes, it was from my favorite restaurant, but it looked a lot different wrapped in aluminum foil.

I still feel guilty at the murderous thoughts that went through my mind, both that night as I grabbed dinner plates out of the cupboard, and on the following morning when I took the kids to the park so that my husband could catch up on his sleep.

Yes, surprises can be wonderful, but they can also be hazardous to your health — and marriage.

OPINION

Editorial

The past, and future, of Carmel's 'urban forest'

One of our favorite books is Harold & Ann Gilliam's "Creating Carmel" — a wonderful volume that rapturously details the sublime mix of natural and human forces that brought precious Carmel-by-the-Sea to life.

The book, which was published in 1992, is a must-read for every Carmelite, and contains wisdom that will help the city deal with the present controversy over some of its aging Monterey Pines.

First of all, the book will convert any reader into a tree-lover by showing them that Carmel's human history cannot be separated from its natural history.

Sebastian Vizcaino, Juan Cabrillo, Junipero Serra, James Franklin Devendorf, Perry Newberry and virtually every other important individual in Carmel's history left behind something that shows the appreciation each had for Carmel's arboreal splendor.

The first Carmelites — the Ohlones — lived in an "enchanted world," where the "pines and cypresses, the rocks and cliffs and hills, like the deer in the woods and the gulls in the sky, were alive and animated with spirits," Creating Carmel says.

The first explorers saw the possibility of commercial exploitation — and the natural beauty — of the forest around Carmel, from which "masts of any size could be obtained," Vizcaino wrote in 1602.

And pioneers of a different sort, Robinson and Una Jeffers, in 1914 "came by wagon over the hill from Monterey, saw this bay glistening through the pines and sea fog, and decided they had found their 'inevitable place,'" the Gilliams write.

Even the original developers of Carmel envisioned the city as a "quiet, family-centered village in the woods."

But the book also provides some important information that should cool the fervor of Carmel's uncompromising tree-advocates who might argue that the city's code should forbid the removal of any tree just because it is feared by a human living in its shadow.

First of all, the book dispels the myth that the land where Carmel stands was thickly forested before the town was built. In fact, many — if not most — of Carmel's trees were planted by humans in the early 1900s.

One 1908 photo shows Carmel point as a meadow — without trees. "We built Tor House on a knoll, where stones jutting out of a treeless moor reminded us of . . . Dartmoor (in England)," Una Jeffers is quoted. And Robinson Jeffers over the years, "planted hundreds of eucalyptus and cypresses that formed a protective windbreak" around Tor House, the book says.

Another famous photo from the early 1900s shows the land above the North end of Carmel Beach — now thickly forested — without a single tree.

And the cypresses along Carmel Beach and up Ocean Avenue were planted by human hands, Creating Carmel says.

Monterey Pines "rarely live more than a century," the Gilliams write. This is the same life-expectency which other experts attribute to the tree. Thus, it is the very trees planted by Carmel founders nearly 100 years ago which are causing fear among many of the people who love Carmel — and its trees — today.

We think all these facts show that Carmel's forest is in absolutely in no danger of being obliterated by the town's current residents who, like their tree-planting predecessors, value a tree for its beauty and serenity and for its role in the natural world, but who also recognize that once in a while a tree has to be removed. Robinson Jeffers planted many trees. He also undoubtedly cut a few down.

Strict protection of Carmel's trees is supported by the city's people. But not with complete disregard for human safety and sanity.

Paula Hazdovac and Sue McCloud both said as much in their campaigns for city council. And they were both elected.

The City Council was right to let a single healthy pine be cut down just because its owner wanted to do so. The world won't end if a few more are selectively cut down, as long as they are replaced.

Caltrans PR blitz story 'misleading'

Dear Editor:

It is important that I clarify some misleading information that appeared in an article in your newspaper April 24, titled "Caltrans to launch $1 million PR blitz."

Caltrans is planning a public awareness campaign as part of the federal- and state-mandated traffic management plan required for every Caltrans construction project. It is designed as a public service to minimize congestion and delays caused by construction activities, to support the use of transit and commute alternatives, and provide information to motorists of traffic impacts during construction.

Public awareness campaigns are very different, and not at all associated with the planning and public hearing process required for approval of the project prior to construction.

The public awareness campaign is part of the construction project itself, and will be utilized just prior to, and during the construction of the highway. It was never intended to be used to "put a positive spin on the plans for the highway." In fact, its purpose is to highlight the problems and delays motorists may encounter during construction, and offer alternatives and suggestions to help avoid these problems.

Over the years, Caltrans has found that one of the most important elements in a traffic management plan is providing information to the public about how a construction project will affect their daily life. Public awareness campaigns have been used in communities throughout the state for many years to help ease the problems associated with highway construction.

For the past several months Caltrans has been working with a Traffic Management Plan Team, comprised of individuals who represent various community interests, including businesses, residents, schools, and visitors, who will be affected by the construction of the Hatton Canyon

PUC hearings on rationing, moratorium set for next month

By PAUL WOLF

JUNE 28 will be the start of hearings before the California Public Utilities Commission on whether Cal-Am can impose peninsula-wide rationing and a moratorium on new water connections.

The first PUC hearing is tentatively set for 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Hyatt Regency in Monterey, according to Steven Kotz, the PUC administrative law judge who will preside over the hearings.

While the focus of the "pre-hearing conference" and the subsequent hearings will be the water company's moratorium and rationing plan, supporters and opponents of the proposed Carmel River dam are likely to testify, since the dam could obviate the need for rationing or a moratorium.

"We plan to participate [in the rationing hearings], but the extent of our participation is the only thing we haven't figured out," said Paul Bruno, chairman of Water For Us, whose main interest is supporting the dam.

Speaking to The Pine Cone this week, Kotz said the focus of the coming hearings is not the dam. Nevertheless, partisans "might want to be there" because the issues are related, he said.

The judge said notices will go out about a month before the pre-hearing conference on how citizens can participate. They do not have to be represented by an attorney, he said.

The PUC hearings will be conducted in true judicial fashion, complete with a court reporter and cross-examination. Eventually, Kotz will make a decision (recommendation) on the advisability of rationing and a moratorium. It carries no legal weight, though, and can be ignored by the PUC when it makes its final decision.

At present, directors on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District oppose Cal-Am's rationing and moratorium plans. Even so, they have directed the MPWMD staff to draft some "rationing assumptions," which could lead to a competing rationing plan to Cal-Am's application before the PUC.

For example, while the Cal-Am plan would penalize excessive water users, the water district's might favor across-the-board cutbacks for all Cal-Am customers.

The prospect of the two agencies pushing different rationing plans "doesn't create conflicts or divisions," according to Henrietta Stern, MPWMD senior planner.

A report on the district's progress on its "rationing assumptions" will be presented at 7 p.m. May 18 at the Monterey City Council chambers.

According to Cal-Am spokeswoman Linda Morris, the peninsula should view itself as hoping for the best and planning for the worst.

She said neither rationing nor a moratorium will be necessary if Cal-Am's 37,000 peninsula customers continue to conserve water as well as they have in the last several (rainy) months.

As of the end of April, the water company has met the reduction mandate set by the State Water Resources Control Board two years ago, she said.

That is a breakthrough because the water company, late last year, was fined $168,000 by the state for exceeding the amount of water it is allowed to take from the Carmel River aquifer, Morris said.

Mandatory rationing and a moratorium on new water users, if approved by the PUC, would kick in only if conservation efforts slack off between now and the end of September.

"The (April) update is very positive," Morris said. "If this conservation remains consistent, then we won't have to go to rationing, which is what we all want."

Panel to discuss water problems

A panel of water experts will hold a freewheeling discussion of the peninsula's water problems at a forum in Pebble Beach Weds., May 20.

The event will be held in the ballroom of The Inn at Spanish Bay, with breakfast starting at 7 a.m. and the forum starting at 8 a.m. The Water Awareness Forum is being presented by the Monterey Commercial Property Owners Association and the Pebble Beach Co. Registration is being accepted through 5 p.m., Monday, May 18 by calling 655-3764 or faxing 375-1583. The fee is $10. Panelists include:

- Ed Anton, State Water Resources Control Board.
- Salzudar Rahman, California PUC.
- Robert Ernst, chairman of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.
- Larry Foy, Cal-Am general manager.
- Gary Shallcross, aid to Assemblyman Fred Keeley.

Champions gather for canine showdown

THE LAWN in front of The Lodge at Pebble Beach provides the setting for a world-class dog show, The Classic of the Pacific. Some 650 blue ribbon winners representing most of the 151 breeds now recognized by the American Kennel Club will be shown. Judging in the Conformation and Obedience rings will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, May 16.

This is the 80th installment of the Del Monte Kennel Club All-Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trial, and this year it is dedicated to one of the original founders of the club, Carmel businessman Derek Rayne. Mr. Rayne died last month, and was a respected dog show judge in several countries as well as being a premiere dog fancier.

The panel of judges for The Classic of the Pacific will be headed by Robert D. Smith of Stephens Church, Virginia, who will judge best of show. American Kennel Club President Alfred Cheaure is scheduled to attend.

Group judging will begin after 1 p.m, followed by best in show at approximately 5 p.m. Danny Hoag will present a sheep herding demonstration with his border collies during the mid-day break in judging.

Show admission is $8 for adults and $5 for children 12 and under. Ticket price includes Pebble Beach gate fee.

CARMEL ART FESTIVAL WILL SHINE ALL WEEKEND

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

THE SECOND DAY of the four-day Carmel Art Festival gets underway today, Friday, May 15, following a successful beginning last night at the Youth Center when winners in the fifth annual Carmel Youth Art Show were announced before cheering friends and families.

Drawings of Carmel artist Hank Ketcham's famed Dennis the Menace enlivened the art show posters at last night's reception.

From 2,000 entries submitted by Carmel School District students, 121 winning paintings, drawings, sculptures, mixed media and photography were framed and hung in the rec hall, selected by a jury of local artists, teachers and gallery owners.

Sponsored by the Carmel Gallery Alliance and the brainchild of Billie DiMonaco, the Youth Art Show receives submissions from preschool children through high school. DiMonaco, a district director of Thomas Kinkade galleries, volunteers her time and efforts each year coordinating the art show, even hanging the winning artwork with the help of her husband, Louis. DiMonaco, who describes herself as a "frustrated artist," says the children's art show is "her passion. This is what I like to do," she said.

Each winning artist received a ribbon, a 1998 Carmel Art Festival poster and an award certificate. Gifts were donated by local businesses and private contributors. The Best of Category winners (see page 2B) received art books from the Carmel Gallery Alliance.

The show continues Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Carmel Youth Center on Fourth Avenue, off Junipero.

Devendorf Park information booth

A complete schedule of events for the remaining three days of the art festival can be picked up at the information booth at Devendorf Park which is also the scene of an al fresco sculpture show which will remain up through Sunday, the last day of the festival. The sculpture exhibit is always popular, with families enjoying picnicking on the lawns amid the sculptures, which range from abstract to traditional works in marble and bronze.

A plein air artist paints under an umbrella at an ocean beach site looking out onto Point Lobos.

'Mayor's Choice' art show, reception

Mayor Ken White's "Mayor's Choice" art show may be seen today and tomorrow, May 15 and 16 at the City Hall council chambers from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. — all paintings selected by Mayor White from the 33 galleries which participate in the alliance. A two-hour mayor's reception will take place in the chambers Saturday, May 16 from 10 a.m. to noon, at which the mayor will greet visitors personally.

Plein air art competition, auction

Highlight of the festival is the plein air art competition and silent art auction which has brought to Carmel more than 90 artists from four western states, Canada and Mexico, all armed with easels and painting paraphernalia. Each festival-registered artist comes to Carmel to paint at outdoor locations around the village, choosing sites that please personal sensibilities. Only bare canvases time-stamped by the mayor's office yesterday and today may be painted upon for competition submission during the two days. The paintings will be judged at Carpenter Hall in the Sunset Cultural Center — Mission Street between Eighth and 10th avenues — Saturday, May 16, from noon until 4:30 p.m. The silent auction takes place during those hours, with art collectors entering bids on bid sheets placed by each piece of art. High bidders will take home the art they have selected.

Gallery Alliance night art walks

Alliance member galleries are holding special exhibits and demonstrations during the festival, but in addition, from 6 to 9 tonight and tomorrow evening, May 15 and 16, participating galleries will host special receptions and events during art "walks" from gallery to gallery. Schedules are available at the Devendorf Park information booth.

Also available at the booth are full color 1998 Carmel Art Festival posters. This year, 1997 Plein Air Competition Gold Medalist Kevin Macpherson's painting, "Ghost Trees of Carmel," has been reproduced and may be purchased in the park or may be ordered by writing an $8 check payable to Carmel Gallery Alliance, P.O. Box 7191, Carmel, CA 93921, or by calling 642-2503, which is also the number for festival information.

Savvy locals dine well. Jaded locals? Their loss

IN THE UNIVERSE of the literary, the name "Steinbeck" put Cannery Row on the world map. In the world of the culinary, the same fame can be attributed to the names of Balestreri and Cutino.

When speaking of the The Sardine Factory, we had heard the terms, "event restaurant," "touristy" and "pricey" more times than I can count and, as such, I'd been a reluctant reviewer.

In the sense that the 29-year-old monument is an experience that visitors should not forgo and that it's a perfect spot to celebrate almost anything, yes, the word "events" applies, but in any deprecatory or disparaging sense, they're wrong . . . dead wrong!

For any occasion, there is an area, spot or corner in the huge (250-seat) multi-roomed establishment for any mood or hankering, formal or casual, and I found it no more expensive than any of its first class, culinary compatriots.

We're all learning that one pays for service; service as seamless and gracious as that offered by the staff, from managers Michael Zaouk with Perry Falahati, to our "spit and polish with a grin" Chilean server, Francisco, should be valued into the equation of a fine dinner's price. We sat next to a handsome couple from Sacramento who answered my query as to whether this was their first visit, "Hell, no . . . we've been coming here for 20 years.

We come at least four times a year. We think it's one of the best restaurants in the world!" Another indication of its popularity was that half the folk seated in the glass-roofed "conservatory" were addressed by name by the waitstaff. Savvy locals dine well. Jaded locals? Their loss.

A favorite for me would be the relatively new Captains' Room. The evening was cool and the crackling fireplace softened the stern facial expressions of 19th century paintings of captains who put ashore in the colorful Monterey of long ago.

The Steinbeck Room, or sitting at the massive mahogany bar (Bert's comment: "Now, that's a bar!"), would be a perfect place to enjoy the unusual plating of Chef Karl Staub's escargot Toscani. The whole arrives looking like a crown formed of funnels of chewy Tuscan bread with six luscious mollusks bathed in Pernod, garlic and herbs. I even ate the frizzled parsley garnish. My partner ordered the artichoke appetizer, and it's worth describing.

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

Picture a jumbo 'choke splayed to receive a filling of zippy salsa of pineapple, onion and diced green chilies. Top with two crispy spring roll spears filled with a blend of artichoke heart, salsify and parsnips. Dotting the plate's edge are tastes of green and red, hot and sweet sauces, and the whole extravaganza arrives dressed with randomly placed chive blossoms. Now remember, we haven't really started to eat yet, but I just had to taste the famed abalone bisque. Creamy and delicate, it deserves its Republican fame. 'Nuff said!

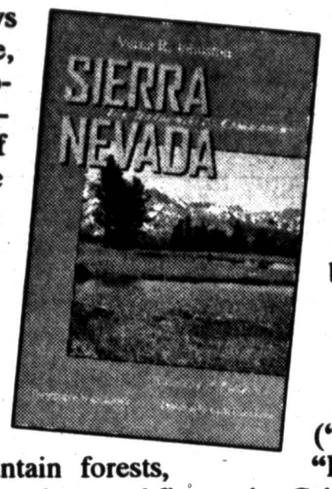
Guide explores 'spectacularly beautiful' Sierra

MUCH AS a perfect hostess shows guests through her dearly loved home, Carmel's Verna R. Johnston, natural history writer and photographer and retired college biology teacher, guides the reader of her updated 1970 "Sierra Nevada, The Naturalist's Companion" through California's spectacularly beautiful 400-mile mountain range.



Covered in the just-released 206-page book published by the University of California Press, are the western foothills, mid-mountain forests, giant sequoias, fire ecology, red firs and lodgepols and the tree line and beyond. Appendix maps clearly show roads in the northern and southern Sierra Nevada, and 50 color photos by Johnston illustrate sensitively this excellent book by a true Sierra Nevada insider.

By Margot Petit Nichols

At 6 p.m. next Thursday, May 21, Johnston will be the guest author and speaker at a "Books and Dinner" evening at The Thunderbird Bookshop Cafe in The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. Cost is $15 for dinner and program. Call 624-1803 for reservations.

DO NOT FAIL to drop by Harrison Memorial Library to see an assemblage created and donated by Jerry DeBono entitled "Classic World Cinema." This 3-dimensional montage of famous old movie houses has as its centerpiece the Carmel Theatre, which from 1936 to 1959 stood on Ocean at Mission where Carmel Plaza is today. A Pat Hathaway vintage postcard photo was enlarged and mounted as the focal point. Retired film industry professional and movie buff Tom Parks, who contributed the basis for the library's Classic World Cinema video collection last year, asked DeBono to create the assemblage to draw attention to the 125 classic videos that can be checked out for home viewing.

ROBERT E. FISHER'S latest book, "Art of Tibet," is stunning. Published by Thames and Hudson Ltd., London, in its World of Art series, the 224-page book has been printed in Slovenia, with 82 black and white and 93 color photographs of Tibetan art reproduced with great clarity. Dozens of exceptional Tibetan tangkas are shown as well as wall paintings and stylistic statuary with its naturalistic detail; lamas, monasteries, ritual objects and daily utensils are here, too, and Fisher's scholarly text is easy to follow and exciting to read.

Fisher, who has a Ph.D. in Buddhist art of China and India, taught Asian art history for 21 years, has lectured widely and traveled throughout India, Southeast Asia and China, and is the author of "Buddhist Art and Architecture." Retired in Carmel, Fisher chairs the city's Committee for Art in Public Places. The book sells for $14.95 in local bookstores.

BEST SELLING AUTHOR Olivia Goldsmith ("First Wives Club," "Flavor of the Month" and "Fashionably Late") will be the keynote speaker at the California Writers Club Conference at Asilomar June 26-28. ANTHONY ZERBE spoke the poetry of e. e. cummings to a packed house at Sunset Theater last Saturday, and took questions and chatted with the audience in the program's second half. He advised poets to "learn other poet's poetry and act it out. This will help you speak your own poetry effectively."

Robinson Jeffers' grandson Lindsay Jeffers, former Carmel Mayor Jean Grace and committee member Dick Hayman, welcome guests to the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation's Annual Garden Party.

It is bitter earnestness
That makes beauty.

— Robinson Jeffers

NUMEROUS WERE the strong souls who climbed the narrow, but deep steps all the way to the top of Hawk Tower on that sunny May 3 afternoon. The occasion was the annual garden party presented by the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation at Tor House.

People and Places

By Dodie Barkley

The faithful gathered to savor the gardens and the stone structure the great American poet, Robinson Jeffers, built for his wife, Una. After talking to Jeffers' grandchildren, Lindsay Jeffers and Una Jeffers Honscheid, I learned a bit more about the reclusive poet and his wife. Una said that as a child living there in the '50s, she was told, "You can wander wherever you like, but don't cross the street." That's how isolated that area still was in Carmel.

Now, several houses abut the property. Still, there is something deeply stirring about the home, and also the view of rocks and ocean from the back garden gates.

Once inside, the narrow, tightly constructed halls and staircases convey an unworldly character. I surmise that even if many of us hadn't read Jeffers poetry, we would know that an unusual soul had lived there, perhaps someone akin to the poets who traversed the moors in Yorkshire, England.

Elise Rotchford on flute, Robert McNamara on lute, mandolin and classical guitar and Celtic musician Jay Salter on the highland bagpipe, really paid homage to Jeffers' passion for the Celtic tradition. Delicate tea sandwiches and cookies, created and baked by the docents, were simply delicious.

Speaking to former Carmel Mayor Jean Grace and others about the relationship of Steinbeck and Jeffers, I heard that there was a bit of competition between the two. But I found myself wishing that they had been friends because there is something spiritual emanating from Tor House, and both Jeffers and Steinbeck were deeply concerned with describing the human condition. If you go there, you might experience it. I'd never visited Tor House before, but I can't wait to return.

Co-chairs of the upcoming Monterey Opera Association's 10th year anniversary celebration, (from top) Edie Karas, Mary Margaret Graham and Morley Brown, pose at Brown's piano.

■ 'Papa' celebrates 93 years

"To what do you owe your longevity?" I asked.

"Give me a hug first," replied Ernie "Papa" Etherton, with a twinkle in his blue eyes, looking all of 70, with a trim waist and full head of fine silver-white hair. So I hugged him, as did 93 other women May 3 at his daughter's home in Carmel Valley. Let me explain.

Etherton's daughters Nancy Rushmer and Peggy Jonas, who live around the corner from "Papa," asked him what he wanted for his 93rd birthday.

"Well," he answered, "what I love best in this world is women!"

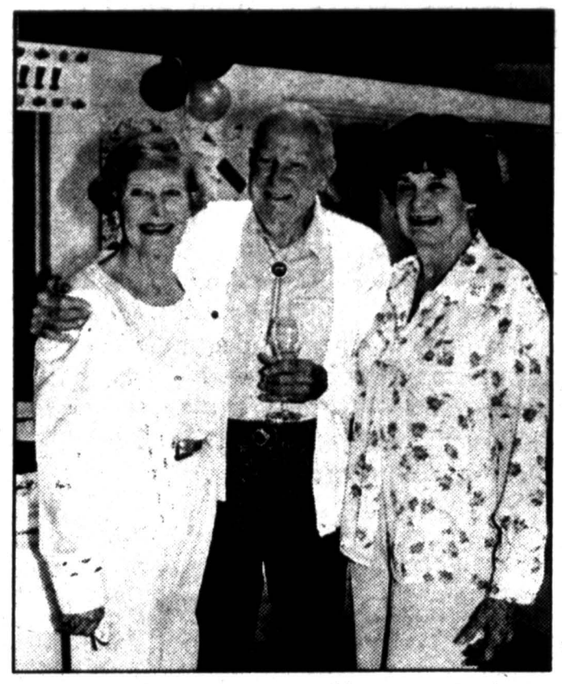
So, they invited 93 women and the "special men in their lives," to join the champagne and cake celebration to honor Ernie's 93rd birthday. He knew about the party, but not about the 93 women.

Outside, where we parked, two granddaughters handed each woman a large badge reading "Papa's girl," to pin on her lapel. And, as we entered, there was "Papa," greeting everyone with hugs and kisses. I've never seen such a happy guy. You just can't help liking a man who loves women so much.

"Papa" spent 36 years in Saudi Arabia as an exploratory engineer. That is where he met many of the women who showed up at the party.

Oh, and his answer to my question was: "I owe my longevity to my two beautiful daughters and to living in Carmel Valley."

Hey, "Papa," live many more years. I'll need another hug next May!



Daughters Peggy Jonas and Nancy Rushmer flank Ernie 'Papa' Etherton at his 93rd birthday party, held at Rushmer's Carmel Valley home. Ernie, looking all of 70, was happy to kiss all 93 women who were invited.

Ed Kleinschmidt, husband of author Frances Mayes; Don Langendorf, president of the Carmel Public Library Foundation; Mary May Altenburg; and seated, Adele Langendorf and guest author Frances Mayes, enjoy the foundation's second annual Literary Feast— A Taste of Tuscany.

■ Monterey Opera Association plans 10th gala

A highly energetic group of board members of the Monterey Opera Association was treated to a delicious Mexican buffet, followed by a special dessert — homemade, double chocolate sundaes — by board member Morley Brown at her Carmel home on May 6.

On Sunday, May 24, event co-chairs Edie Karas, Mary Margaret Graham and Brown have chosen the elegant ballroom at The Inn at Spanish Bay for a 10th anniversary blowout.

The board has hired Sid Cato to produce the entertainment for the gala. Cato will bring professional opera singers from San Francisco. He will also utilize local talent: Peter Smith, president of CSUMB and a fine tenor, and local mayors Dan Albert, Sandy Koffman, Don Jordan, Ken White and Alan Styles will enact a hilarious spoof about their respective cities.

This is slated to be one of the finest events of the season, and tickets at $75 each are going fast. For more information, call 372-2721.

■ A Taste of Tuscany — a literary feast

The Carmel Public Library Foundation presented its second annual Literary Feast — A Taste of Tuscany, featuring Frances Mayes, author of the national best seller, "Under the Tuscan Sun: At Home in Italy." It all took place May 8 at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach.

Mayes' non-fiction book dealing with her experiences in buying an ancient Italian home and refurbishing it, has been on the best seller list for more than 30 weeks. Board president Don Langendorf told us that more than half a million copies have been sold.

Adele Langendorf invited Mayes to speak, and the Foundation's "Feast" was a sellout, for more than 180 guests attended. Kudos to co-chairs Mary May Altenburg and Cindy Murphy for a lovely buffet treat and table decorations.

The mission of the Carmel Public Library Foundation is to raise private funds and endowments to ensure that excellent and free service is continued at Harrison Memorial and Park Branch libraries. Funds raised are for library needs not provided by the City of Carmel. If you are interested in learning more about the Foundation, call 624-2811.

DINING...

I love seabass, but the size of the portion wrapped in prosciutto and potato leaves defeated me . . . "any sacrifice for one's art." I attacked the leviathan with good intentions because it was delicate, flaky and subtly connected to its sauce of lentil, cabbage and fresh sage leaves.

More than one special saluted Asia. Sesame crusted, rare ahi tuna arrived laid over a nest of soy-seasoned soba noodles and pickled cucumbers. Elevation on the plate was provided by halves of a spring roll stuffed with lobster.

Beef is the specialty of the house. You may choose from a 20 oz. beef rib chop, a 16 oz. New York cut or a filet mignon with a piquant brandy sauce. An adjacent diner was served a roast pork chop in a dijon-pecan sauce and pronounced it (all 16 ounces) "colossal" both in size and flavor. This is definitely a restaurant for the serious eater.

About the Cellar

Before I let loose my sweet tooth, let me ramble a bit about the wine cellar. The cellar is the domain of Cellarmaster Andréa Fulton whose objective concerning its prize-winning contents is to inspire customers to her philosphy that "wine is an artform and a grand adventure." She radiates the conviction, as does the entire staff, that the "right combination of wine and food, good company and gracious service provides the ultimate dining experience." To that end, the huge spirits inventory (30,000 bottles) of The Sardine Factory runs from quality but reasonable California non-vintage selections to a dazzling 11 pages of French vintage treasures. The French Bordeaux collection may be one of the finest in the world, according to Richard Elia, publisher of the Quarterly Review of Wine.

In tune with this emphasis is the Wine Cellar (note the uppercase "W" and "C"), a relatively new addition to the Sardine Factory. Located deep in the cellars themselves, the room provides a peek into the elegance of centuries past, and can accommodate up to 26 guests. The banquet table, the cognac bar, the locker and the tobacco humidor were crafted by Craig Clark from a single ancient redwood. The theme of the room is "created antiquity," housing a host of genuine treasures such as the 16th century chandelier and candelabra from a Spanish Abbey. The table was set, with ice already in the water goblets, for a dinner meeting of lawyers. Lucky fellows!

I promised dessert? Well, you shall share mine. While remonstrating that we had no room, no, no, no, there arrived two folded banana crêpes, wetting their high caloric "tummies" in a rum caramel sauce which lapped at the edges of a ball of pineapple/coconut ice cream.

"It's light, hardly any calories at all," twinkled Francisco, handing a spoon and dessert fork to each of us. Satan surely was a waitperson in a past life!

(FEMA-1203-DR-CA, HMGP 1203-213-1011)

PUBLIC NOTICE

Public notification is hereby given by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) of the intent to reimburse the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea for eligible costs incurred for Rio Road Culvert Replacement. This notice applies to FEMA's Hazard Mitigation Grant Program.

The President declared a major disaster in California on February 9, 1998. The declaration included assistance under FEMA's Hazard Mitigation Grand Program. This assistance is granted under the authority of Public Law 93-288, as amended (The Stafford Act).

This notice concerns the Rio Road Culvert Replacement Project in the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea. This project is located at Rio Road near the southern boundary of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, connecting the City to Highway 1 within the Greater Monterey Peninsular Planning Area. Rio Road is primarily located in the unincorporated area of Monterey County and connects to Junipero Street within the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea. This project is a joint city-county project for mitigating a flooding problem in the vicinity of the Carmel Mission. The new storm drain - will replace an existing old storm drainpipe with larger drainpipe in an improved alignment discharging at an existing flapper valve into the Carmel River. The new system is designed to handle floodwaters up to a 20-year flood. The new pipe will cross the baseball fields, several sanitary sewer transmission mains, pass through a willow tree grove near the river and then discharge into the Carmel River.

The President's Executive Order 11988 on Floodplain Management requires that all Federal actions in or affecting the base floodplain be reviewed for opportunities to relocate out of the floodplain or to minimize future damage from flooding. FEMA has determined that Rio Road Culvert Replacement Project would not result in adverse effects associated with the occupancy of or modification to floodplains.

The President's Executive Order 11990 on Protection of the Wetlands requires all Federal actions give consideration to relocating outside of wetland areas and to develop alternate project plans to protect wetlands. FEMA has determined that no wetlands are located within the project area and therefore would not be affected.

A detailed review, including study of alternatives and possible affects was completed. Numerous National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) issues will be addressed during the progression of the project. ENDANGERED SPECIES ACT - A qualified biologist will conduct a pre-construction survey to determine if any nests, roosting sites or suitable habitat are present for peregrine falcons or bald eagles or any other federal proposed or listed avian species. The results of this survey will determine if any additional mitigation measure would be necessary. In order to preserve the existing native habitat, if riparian vegetation is removed to complete the project, the applicant will replace with compatible native vegetation. COAST ZONE MANAGEMENT ACT - The proposed project is located within the coastal zone and will require a coastal permit prior to the initiation of the project. NATIONAL HISTORICAL PRESERVATION ACT - The project area is located approximately 500 feet from the Mission San Carlos Borromeo de Carmelo (Carmel Mission) which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, designated as a Nation Historic Landmark, and a California State Historical Landmark. This area was a popular habitation site for Native Americans...A moderate potential for historic properties exists within the project area. In order to avoid any adverse affects, a qualified archaeologist will monitor ground disturbance activities associated with the installation of the improved culverts. CLEAN WATER ACT - The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will be contacted to determine if a Section 404 Permit is needed. STREAMBED ALTERATION - The California Department of Fish and Game will be contacted to determine if a Section 1600 Streambed Alteration Agreement is needed.

The public was invited to participate in the review process by providing comments during the initial 30-day comment period. Federal funds will not be released until 15 days after publication of this final notice.

Interested persons may obtain addition information about this project and application of the Executive Orders by contacting James Buika, Acting Division Director of Mitigation, FEMA Region IX, P.O. Box 29998, Building 105, Presidio of San Francisco, San Francisco, CA 94129-1250.

Daughter searches for works of Pio Junco, well-known Carmel artist of the '50s

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

IF YOU RECOGNIZE the painting style of "Mater Doloroso," depicted at right, you may know where other oil paintings by former Carmel artist Pio Junco are located.

Currently searching for art work of her deceased father, Daria Junco of Cambridge, Massachusetts is cataloging his works. Daria does not want to purchase the art, only to locate and hopefully acquire photographs of the drawings, paintings or illustrations. Daria's Norwegian mother, Tulla Jacobsen Junco, is the subject of the painting shown here, which received several awards and was displayed at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York in 1953.

A painting that Daria feels "runs a close second" to "Mater Doloroso" is entitled "Dignity in the Flesh," a three-quarter back view nude brushing her hair, for which her mother also posed.

'Mater Doloroso' (circa 1950) by former Carmel artist, Pio

In a 1955 Pine Cone story, Pio Junco is referred to as a "distinguished and internationally known painter who studied at the San Fernando School of Art in Madrid and who had been an assistant to the painter Zuloaga." Pio Junco was co-director, with his second wife, Devi Davies Junco, of Hidden Village, a gallery and crafts center located across from the Customs House in Monterey. Junco's own art studio was in the Court of the Golden Bough in Carmel, Daria believes. He moved to Cuba in the late '50s and died there at the age of 47.

Readers who might have a lead for Daria Junco can contact her by writing to 1663 Cambridge St., Cambridge, MA 02038; by telephone at (617) 491-6960; or by facsimile at (617) 542-6452.

STORY AND PHOTO/MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

YES! ANOTHER YORKSHIRE TERRIER, this time a multicolored Silkie named Chelsea Leonard, nee Chelsea Aslanian. When former mom Vicki Aslanian became a missionary in Mexico, she tearfully entrusted 6-year-old Chelsea to the loving care of Beverly and Dan Leonard. Now eight, this tiny bundle of charm sleeps in comfort with her adoptive parents and is taken for daily walks on the Scenic Road pathway above Carmel Beach.

Doting Dad Dan and Mom Beverly say Chelsea has never been in a scrape — in fact, we were told she's "a good girl, just wonderful, and lots of company."

True to her feisty breed, Chelsea barks fearlessly at the very large dogs she encounters at the beach, setting the big guys straight as to her heavy mettle. Her favorite food is low-fat turkey, but she also gobbles up the duckmeal prescribed by her vet.

As for recreation, Chelsea has a favorite ball that she plays with at home, rolling it about the house with her tiny nose.

Her Yorkshire terrier lineage is traced to Yorky Emily Sorenson of Carmel (her litter mother), and her distinguished politico grandmother, Yorky Albertine Riordan of Los Angeles, who resides in administrative splendor with Mayor Richard Riordan, her dad. It's always good to be close to Yorkies in high places, although Chelsea has never been known to ask a favor of her well-placed grandma.

The White House

No spin doctor is necessary to describe the features of this stately and charming home...one could say it's politically correct. It has been lovingly updated by the party in control and is located in one of Carmel's finest neighborhoods...social security that will last. This is a great place for a caucus with double French doors leading to the the spacious patio from the living room and the formal dining room. Champagne fun raising is not illegal in this home. Even though Lincoln didn't sleep in one of the three bedrooms in the main house, it won't be difficult to find guests to occupy them or to occupy the adorable guest house tucked under the redwoods at the back of the .4 acre. The master suite has a presidential new bath with a commanding view of the park-like setting. You might want to contact your independent counsel and investigate this beautiful home before it is leaked to the press! By the way, there is no need to call Leon for access; just call me. Condominium bull charges ahead

First Quarter Report

THE BULL market in Monterey Peninsula condominiums continued its charge during the first quarter of 1998. The Market Barometer, which surged to the 40%-plus range during the third and fourth quarters of 1997, jumped to an incredible 57.58% on April 1st, and that was not an April fools' joke, just the facts.

The Market Barometer reads the percentage of listings that are in escrow or, in plain language, are under contract.

As we said a few weeks ago in our report on houses, for years we felt that a reading of 20% or higher was pretty good. The collective nine condo markets of the Monterey Peninsula have now had readings above 20% since October, 1996, above 40% since October, 1997, and hitting the aforementioned 57% on April 1.

Inventory Ebbs & Flows

Let's go a step further and see how the high barometer readings have impacted the inventory of units on the market. Normally the inventory ebbs on January 1st, begins to grow in the first quarter, peaks during the summer or early autumn and begins to recede again at the end of the year as we head into the holiday season.

Superficially, that is what appears to be happening again in 1998. The number of condo listings shrank to an anemic 70 on January 1, the lowest since March 1990, and grew to

Tour features artists' homes

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE CARMEL Preservation foundation will host its annual House Tour from 1 to 4 p.m. on May 31.

According to the foundation, this year's exciting tour will take participants back to "the happiest times in early Carmel, when artists and craftsmen were arriving to supplant the writers and poets who were the first round of creative Carmelites."

The neighborhood to be toured will be Carmel Woods, which was laid out by architect and engineer Mark Daniels for Del Monte Properties in 1922.

Its grand opening in 1923 — with lots for sale — was "celebrated with great excitement," at the commemoration of Jo Mora's statue of Junipero Serra. The statue is located at Camino del Monte and Serra — said to be the spot where the early Fathers used to rest on their way to the Mission after the weary climb from Monterey.

The occasion heralded the beginning of a period of eager lot-buying and home construction in an era when building homes was something the community loved to see.

Homes built and/or lived in by various notable citizens will be on the tour — including Perry Newberry, Jo Mora, Hazel Watrous, Dene Denny, Francis Whitaker, Donald Hale, and Ann Nash, not to mention M.J. Murphy and Hugh Comstock.

A total of eleven houses will be on the tour and a reception will follow.

HOME & GARDEN

Free community organic garden plots available

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THEY ARE "going like hotcakes," but there are about 15 garden plots still available for the planting at Monterey Peninsula College, according to Peggy Williams of the Organic Community Garden project.

Williams and organic gardening teacher Sandra Forman organized the land sharing between Monterey Peninsula College and the community.

The plots range from about 10-foot squares to 20-foot squares.

Some are in full sun and others are a bit shady (which Williams prefers, as a relief from the hot weather at her Carmel Valley home.)

"There's plenty of water available" and some tools to share for the raised-bed gardens, said Williams. The Marina landfill donated enough compost to till in about five inches of amendment.

The garden is organic, which means no poisons or pesticides. "Instead of snail bait, for instance, we put out pans of beer," advised Williams. They planted a winter cover crop of fava beans, clover and wheat — which were all tilled in to improve the soil. Aguajito stables provided the horse manure.

The plots are handicapped accessible, behind the Physical Sciences Building at the college. "Children are absolutely welcome, with their adult supervisors," said Williams, who added that last year's gardeners raised a good crop of tomatoes, squash, corn, herbs, greens and flowers.

For more information, call Peggy Williams at 659-5576 or Sandra Forman at 372-5429.

Carmel landmark converted for 'coffee culture'

By PAUL WOLF

ON THE southwest corner of Ocean and Lincoln, the Seven Arts Building is a true Carmel landmark.

Built in the 1920s by thespian-politician Herbert Heron (he was mayor from '30 to '32), the Seven Arts Building was the first home of the Carmel Art Association. Photographer Edward Weston had a small studio space upstairs in what is now the mezzanine.

As for the architecture, it is classic Carmel Tudor Revival.

Now, a Carmel couple, Dick and Barbara Ely, have tailored the inside of the old building to fit the specifications of the new "coffee culture," which has hit the Monterey Peninsula but has been slow to take root in the village.

The Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co. on Ocean (as it is formally called) is scheduled to open Friday, May 15.

It will be, Ely says, a "coffee outlet store and cafe" — a complement to their four-year-old Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co. at the Mid Valley Shopping Center.

"In the 1970s and 1980s, people went to bars, but that isn't the case anymore," said Dick Ely. "Now people want an alternative to an expensive meal, a place where they can meet people, sit down and talk. This is not a hang-out, but we have no problems with chessboards or someone who wants to read The Pine Cone or the New York Times."

Dick Ely, owner of two Coffee Roasting Co. stores, says his new outlet will satisfy some of the burgeoning demand for fine coffees.

During the early 1990s, there was a proliferation of cafes and informal eateries serving coffee and espresso in Monterey, Pacific Grove and elsewhere on the Peninsula. Carmel's main contribution to this ferment was Caffe Cardinale in the Las Tiendas courtyard off Ocean, a block and a half from the Seven Arts Building.

"I don't feel threatened by this competition," Ely said, noting that the supply has not come near the rising demand. "Each of us adds to the other's total coffee experience."

He said tourists from all over the world would love to have more places where they can buy high-quality coffee.

Unlike Gasper and his son Rocco Cardinale, Ely has no immediate plans to sell soups, salads and sandwiches.

In addition, all of his coffee roasting will be done at the Carmel Valley store. "I personally believe you shouldn't roast coffee in a city," he said. "Some people love the aroma and others just don't."

Ely said the cafe will serve everything from straight cups of java to fancy, very rich concoctions, such as the Eskimocha, a drink invented by one of his employees. It includes a shot of espresso with a scoop of Ghirardelli chocolate blended with vanilla ice cream topped with whipped cream.

"It's almost a meal in itself," Ely said.

To convert the former twin Monterey Baking Company spaces into a 760-square-foot cafe, the Elys gutted the inside, installed brick floors, cherry wood counter tops, brass coffee bean bins and European pine furnishings. Classical music will grace the air, he noted.

"I hope people will come in here and then leave saying, "Wow, this has been a wonderful coffee experience."

a semi-respectable 99 on April 1.

Mirroring once again our report on the market for single family residences, the apparently normal rise in inventory has been offset by the exceedingly high percentage of properties in escrow.

Of the 70 properties on the market on January 1, 30 were in escrow leaving 40 available for buyers. On April 1, the number of listings had grown to 99, but since 57 of them were in escrow, only 42 remained available to buyers, a net gain of two over January 1st.

In spite of the diminished inventory 68 condos sold during the first quarter, an increase of 33% over the first quarter of 1997. This is a large increase no matter the circumstances. Coupled with the low inventory, however, it is spectacular.

In High Meadow all three of the current offerings are in escrow. At the Mouth of the Valley there are three listings at Riverwood, two of which are in escrow. At Arroyo Carmel, which is contiguous to Riverwood, there is only one listing, and it too is in escrow. That leaves a grand total of two units available for buyers, slim pickin's, indeed.

Last week we faxed to a client a new listing in High Meadow. Before we got a reply back from our client the unit was in escrow. It wasn't long ago when the typical High Meadow unit would take months to sell. For now, anyway, those days are over. Buyers have to be quick in this sellers' market.

Highway. We thank them all for their work, and appreciate their efforts to help their community during construction of the project.

Mike Brown
Caltrans Interim District Director, San Luis Obispo

Please stop the 'tree harassment'

Dear Editor:

Exactly four years ago we bought our wonderful house here in Carmel-by-the-Sea. It took 35 years to do it, but we were determined. Happily, our life savings as well as our lives are tied up in this unique and beautiful village.

Our happiness has been somewhat dissipated due to the "TREE" fight. A recent Letter to the Editor and subsequent paid ad (paid for by unknowns), while bordering on a form of fascism, were certainly draconian.

The tree owners did everything legally. EVERYTHING! Let it go! Harassment is irritating many more people than one can imagine.

Of course, we are all aware that it is the transplanted L.A. folks that cause all the problems. Yep, that was said at a public meeting by a member of the Beach and Forest commission (and reiterated by a few others). When courteously asked to apologize, the member refused! And this person is making decisions that affect all of us. What next? (Incidentally, many who moved from L.A. have planted numerous trees since moving here.)

On the bright side, we are most fortunate to have some City Council members who still respect and uphold certain inalienable rights.

We suggest . . . we implore the harassing to stop. There are so many more important things to fret about. Wars are still raging . . . people are still starving . . . disease is still killing . . . and kids are carrying guns, shooting each other as well as stand by innocents.

We are all so very fortunate to live in this most marvelous of all places.Please, let's do it in peace with respect.

We are proud to sign our names.

Larry and Maureen Bordan, Carmel

Why not survey?

Dear Editor:

Recently the Carmel City Council voted 3 to 2 not to survey the voters of Carmel-by-the-Sea regarding their support or lack of support for the Hatton Canyon project.

Questions: 1. What is wrong with finding out what the voters think about large issues facing the Council? Isn't this the democratic process? 2. Is the Council afraid of the results?

One council person said that the survey could not be trusted. Are the voters of Carmel dishonest? I think not.

Sue McCloud and Paula Hazdovac supported the survey — why the rest opposed?

Brock Lippitt, Carmel

Listen to the citizens

Dear Editor:

I recently attended a Carmel City Council meeting and was deeply disappointed and angered over the city council's rejection of Sue McCloud's postcard survey. I thought it was a democratic approach. It tells me and many more

Carmel citizens exactly what council members think of us. One member had the audacity to insinuate it may lead to a falsified survey. Our opinion is insignificant and there is skepticism as to our honesty.

They need our votes but to participate in a survey our thoughts and ideas are not needed. I have been here a few years and have met many loyal Carmelites. Above all, they are honest.

I have a suggestion for THIS City Council. Start making decisions, forget feasibility studies, accept responsibility and show some creativity. Above all, listen to opinions from citizens of Carmel. After all, WE are the heart of Carmel.

Listen to Sue McCloud and you will be heading into a sensible and sound direction. You should feel very fortunate that she's on your City Council. Sue McCloud is one of the most brilliant and honest women I have had the privilege to meet.

Buck Rumsey, Carmel

'Whatever happened to democracy?'

Dear Editor:

As a resident of Carmel, I was appalled at the nearly unanimous rejection by the full City Council of Sue McCloud's proposal to send out a one-question mailer on the controversial Hatton Canyon Scenic Highway to the residents of Carmel (Pine Cone May 8). I personally have not yet formed an opinion on the matter, but would be very interested in knowing the opinion of other Carmel residents and I am shocked that all Carmel City Council members don't feel the same way. After all, aren't council persons elected to serve the people who voted for them and not their own interests? Sue got elected partly on her campaign pledge to survey the public on major issues. I applaud Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac as the only other council person who supported the idea of developing a postcard survey. The fact that the postcard survey would cost the city about $1,200 should not be used as a smoke screen to justify rejection of determining what the Carmel homeowners feel about such an important issue that affects their lives.

All Carmel residents should remember this issue when voting for City Council people in future elections.

Roger Frasca, Carmel

'Fiscal responsibility to the public'

Dear Editor:

The letter by Judy Higgerson may create confusion about recent Medicare cutbacks. I am in agreement that many governmental reforms have serious and detrimental effects on patients, but the area of reform that insists home care nurses do more teaching to have patients take responsibility for their treatment and continued therapies is one of the proactive benefits. The purpose of Medicare home care is to provide intermittent visits, usually after an acute problem, until the patient is no longer homebound. Medicare was NEVER intended for long term care. Agencies have encouraged excessive visits which created not only abuse of the system but dependency by patients. Thus the focus, today, on fraud and abuse problems. We, in concert with our referring physicians, have stressed care delivery, teaching and our patients, so often in fear of losing their independence, have been happy to take part in their own recovery/rehabilitation process. We have a utilization rate below the national average without jeopardizing care. By doing what Medicare home care is supposed to do, we are working with the system to keep it working. Long term care is a different issue. As Medicare Certified agencies, we are in the business of care but, also, fiscal responsibility to our payors, the public. We do the public more justice by informing them properly than by appealing to their emotions on important issues.

To now deny those who long ago purchased land in Carmel and Pebble Beach the right to construct homes which otherwise meet (already) strong Architectural Controls is unfair, and not consistent with those democratic values in which most Monterey County residents believe.

While recognizing that The Pine Cone is well-read on the Peninsula, I encourage you specifically to circulate this editorial to those elected and appointed officials who seem to have lost sight of the fact that their duty to preserve and protect the natural resources of the area does not outweigh their responsibility to those property owners who for years have invested their resources (if in no other way than by paying taxes) to help make the community a desirable place to live — and who are now being denied the basic right of home ownership.

Chuck Lisberger, Pebble Beach

Water — Relief later or relief now?

Dear Editor,

Your editorial entitled 'Lot owners should get water' (Pine Cone, April 24th) argues rightly, that ' . . . the owners of Carmel's few undeveloped lots should get water. They're bearing a disproportionate share of the burden of our inadequate water supply, and that's simply not right.' One can certainly add other considerations to the already strong case you offer of unfair burdens created by denying a few owners the use of their property. Without water service and the ability to obtain building permits now or at any time in the near future, these lots have no credible standing in the market place comparable to those that do. As such these owners are unable to sell their lots if they wanted, or are exposed to (or even fallen prey to) property speculators who search for 'stress sale' situations.

As well there may be owners of these lots who have come to be deceased leaving their estates in doubt, with problems, or by having to 'sell-off' in order to close the estate, settling for considerably less value then they would otherwise have been fairly entitled.

Certainly of even greater weight to bear is that while these few undeveloped lot owners are being denied the use or fair value sale of their property they have ongoing costs of lot 'up-keep' (fire hazard reduction for example) and they have the continuing burden to pay all related property taxes toward sustaining public administration, public services and public projects, none of which they can enjoy or benefit by. Finally to this can be added the burden, as we all know, that each day the Local Public Planning and Building Agencies are devising incredibly more complex restrictive and expensive code constraints on building permits which will be imposed on these owners of undeveloped lots who could and would have built their homes years ago had they not been denied the opportunity to obtain a building permit.

So the more central question arises, given this extraordinary level of bearing a disproportionate share of the burden, why does the Editor conclude with the recommendation that 'whatever the solution to our water dilemma, it must include water for the owners of existing lots.' This conclusion supports or allows the burden to continue indefinitely. It ties the relief from the burden on these owners to some indefinite future 'solution.' I would think that this situation would morally and legally deserve relief now, not later, by making these few lots of record immediately eligible for water service and building permits. How much more irreparable harm must be served out? I would invite your further opinion.

Russell L. Quacchia, Carmel

Water not the problem

Dear Editor,

Water is being used as a false constraint to development.

Carmel has an abundance of water. In 1974 I hired a hydrologist who validated the concept of recycling water from the Carmel tertiary treatment plant. Water can be pumped through a 12-inch pipe buried in the river bottom and released above the village.

When the winter rains begin, the pumping stations can be reversed to generate energy (which PG&E is mandated to purchase) as the run-off flows into the ocean.

Result? The Carmel River would run year-round. Vegetation would stabilize the stream banks. Aquifers would be full. Fisheries would flourish. Pure, potable water would abound for residents, visitors, and all other life forms, including multi-toed salamanders and their well-intentioned champions.

Such recycling would not even affect the existing transfer of tertiary-treated water to Pebble Beach for its creative use on golf courses.

The wealth of every civilization has been based on water storage, distribution and use. We live in a well-nourished oasis, a mecca for millions of visitors, a haven for a handful of residents.

Why not put this false, politically-motivated crises behind us, implement a lasting, affordable and common-sense solution and get on with the water quality of our lives restored?

Gary Koeppel, Carmel/Big Sur
